About the Webinar

Today, the entire world is facing the cataclysm of COVID-19 pandemic and its reverberations will inevitably be deep and pervasive. A Major health emergency and a severe economic crisis has been caused by COVID-19.

All sections of the society are adversely affected and effusively trying to mitigate the impact. Millions of people lost their jobs amid essential containment measures and voluntary social distancing. Developing economies and the emerging markets face exceptional challenges under the deteriorating global economic conditions and their less equipped health systems. As per the latest IMF report, the global economy is likely to contract by over 3 percent in 2020 and it would be the steepest slowdown since the Great Depression of the 1930s. The outbreak of COVID-19 is disproportionately affecting the vulnerable groups, raising the specter of a humanitarian catastrophe.

It would be the biggest challenge for policymakers to make good and fast decisions under the emerging circumstances. The outbreak of COVID-19 pandemic has been at an overwhelming speed and enormous scale.

Thus, we the academicians as well as industrialist should be the forefront to provide some sort of guidance and suggest the way ahead for the economy in the Post COVID-19 era. The Webinar holds the vision of engaging academicians and industrialists in a meaningful assignment and will contribute to the intellectual wealth of the world.
